Global Product Management Trainee (f/m) 100%

The Automotive industry is facing major disruptions driven by connectivity, autonomous drive, new mobility modes and electrification. In the Strategy and Marketing department, your role will consist in data mining, analyzing and structuring market and technology information to support the Global Product Managers in consolidating the strategy for the future. One important output of this activity is the positioning of the current products and technologies of Autoneum portfolio on their respective life cycle. Available source of information include conference proceedings and internal sales planning tools.

You are currently completing or have recently completed a university degree in Engineering and/or Marketing and would like to enter the professional world with a first comprehensive experience in product management. You are a service-minded, flexible and result-oriented team-player with strong organizational and analytical skills. You are also capable to interpret data and able to synthesize well. Working in an international environment and a pro-active attitude combined with a curious and eager to learn mindset makes you our ideal candidate. You possess high communication proficiency in English and very good knowledge of Microsoft Office tools.

Are you interested in this exciting challenge within a multinational and multicultural environment? Then we are looking forward to your complete application (motivation letter, CV, reference letters, diplomas and certificates).
